PROFILE

An Information Technology graduate from Nanyang Polytechnic, I am interested in exploring the possibilities of software and driven by the desire to connect others.

Besides broadening my skills in project management and front-end development beyond my industrial expertise, my prior experience has allowed me to develop a user-centric lens that values the vividness of each unique experience of technology. With a humble passion for current innovations and their potential intersections with various industries, I seek hands-on opportunities to innovate with a team to unlock new and more sustainable ways of engaging with the world.
